Shintoism is based on a belief in, and worship of, kami. Kami can be elements of the landscapes or forces of nature (sometimes these forces are personified as they were in Ancient Greece and Rome, but the personifications are not seen as deities). Shintoism has no gods. Nor does it provide a moral code as most other religions do.

Korean indigenous religion is a kind of shamanistic religion known as either Muism or Sinism in Western sources. In modern times, in both countries, both Shinto and Muism are regarded as tradition much more than they are thought of as religion. So I believe that Korea and Japan share the same viewpoint on festivals and religion in modern times.
