European HRM is problematic. Despite all the pressures towards convergence, differences in cultural and trade union context produce divergent relationships. Studies also suggest that the divergence of HR practices in French economies do not constitute convergence to an International human resource model.

Convergence And Divergence Of Human Resources

1. Introduction. Whether organizations and their HR practices are converging (i.e., becoming more similar, convergence perspective) or diverging in their practices (divergence perspective) is a matter of intense scholarly interest (e.g. Brewster, C., et al., 2015, Mayrhofer, W., et al., 2011). Although this debate has been ongoing for decades, it was only towards the end of the twentieth ...
